

SMILE's Ocean Science Challenge

High School students participate in an Ocean Science Challenge at Oregon State University. The focus in 2012 was the use of media to share the science and impact of Harmful Algal Blooms.

Bringing unrepresented youth to a university where they learn from research faculty, meet college students, and apply their knowledge to addressing a community health need, creates a “vivid vision” for an academic future. These students are sharing their proposed newspaper science section on HABs.
